

BY TELEGRAPH.

THE GREAT LABOR QUESTION.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS AND RESULTS OF THE CONVENTION AT MEMPHIS.

FORMATION OF A GRAND CHINESE IMMIGRATION COMPANY.

THIRTY THOUSAND DOLLARS SUBSCRIBED.

A CHINESEMAN'S SPEECH—EXPERIENCE OF A SOUTH CAROLINIAN—WHAT THE LABORERS WILL COST AND HOW TO GET THEM—WHAT COMMODORE HENRY SAYS, &c., &c.

The movement for the introduction of Chinese labor into the South has at last taken definite shape. The convention of those interested in the subject, which adjourned at Memphis on Thursday last, resulted in the formation of a stock company, to be called the "Mississippi Valley Immigration Labor Company," for the purpose of introducing Chinese laborers, to supply the great want of labor experienced everywhere in the Mississippi Valley and adjoining States. The capital of the company is to be $1,000,000, with the privilege of increasing it to $3,000,000, and all capitalists and planters who feel an interest in the movement are invited to co-operate and take stock in the company. Books for subscription to the stock are at once to be opened in Memphis, and the company is to be organized on the 15th day of August, by the election of twelve directors, who shall hold their offices for twelve months, and until their successors are elected.

DEATH TO THE INDIAN!

St. Louis, July 19.—Omaha reports say that General Carr's recent Indian victory was more complete than at first stated. Four hundred Indians and horses, a large quantity of powder, arms, and some of the best of the Indian warriors, were taken. The money was given to him. Well, a white woman, who was captured, told this body of Indians, which fought Colonel Forsyth last year. A dispatch from St. Helena, Montana, says that Major Eastman and another man were attacked and wounded by Indians near Fort Benton. The citizens in retaliation killed three Indians who were in town.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

New York, July 19.—The session of the International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations, at Portland, Me., closed on Saturday.

A movement for the education of colored negroes, to preach to the colored people of the South, was inaugurated and a large amount so far as it was embraced on the spot.

EUROPE.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS IN ENGLAND.

London, July 19.—The first general meeting of the Woman's Franchise Society was held yesterday. Among the distinguished persons present were the Junior Lord of the Treasury, Henry Fawcett, M. P., John Stuart Mill, Lord Houghton, John Bright, James Stansfeld, Charles Kingsley, Louis Blanc. Many ladies were present. Addresses were delivered by well known speakers, and resolutions in favor of female suffrage were unanimously adopted.

PARIS.

PARIS.

Paris, July 19.—Marshall Vaillant has been reappointed Minister of the Imperial Household. The Paris press regard the new ministry as merely one of transition.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE.

A cigar dealer in Jersey City was arrested yesterday upon a charge of counterfeiting, and held to bail.

The Cuban filibusters arrested at Gardner's Island were not released, but are confined in Fort Lafayette.

A large number of tobacco revenue stamps, intended for the West, were destroyed by the Erie Railroad accident.

The Grenier has arrived at New York, from Rio Janeiro, with sixty-five destitute American sailors from that port.

The agent of the Kansas Emigration Company has gone to San Francisco and China with funds and letters of credit.

Several thousand Remington rifles were shipped, yesterday, from Havana to Sagua la Grande, Remedios and Nuevitas, to arm the volunteers about to take the field.

If the landing of the French cable in Massachusetts be forbidden, the managers propose to lay a cable between St. Pierre and Cuba, and so obtain a connection with the United States.

General Wirt Adams and Colonel H. P. Hunt, representing the Yazoo Valley Railroad, from Yokohama to Memphis, arrived in Washington yesterday, and leave that place for the North-west to-day.

The partner and chief clerk of Coutourier & Co. delivered themselves up yesterday and were bailed. One hundred and fifty-three thousand and cigars seized by Collector Stockdale were libeled yesterday.

It is reported that a new Cuban camp has been established at West Hoboken, N. J. Two hundred of the men who were in the Gardner's Island expedition and eluded the vigilance of the authorities are said to be in the camp.

But bankers arrested in New York upon a charge of embezzlement, were assigned to the Oyer and Terminer Court yesterday. Three of them pleaded guilty. The Judge announced that he would not sentence them until the others had been tried.

The Episcopal Council.—A correspondent of the Fall Mail Gazette writes from B. M., under date of June 25:

The Pope is wholly taken up with the subject of the Popes, and is speaking of nothing else, and seems to think of nothing else. He has already struck a medal which is to commemorate the event, and he is giving out to each bishop, celebratory medals, here recently said the Council presented a great danger to the Holy Father, who in his present excited state, was not equal to the opposition, and might have a poppish stroke if exposed to it. Whether under this apprehension, or on some other ground, indicating persons have sought to, set the Council postponed (till December, 1870, and the Italian journals assert that this has been resolved upon. The general uncertainty about it is evident in the contracts made with the bishops who have taken apartments, the terms all requiring the payment of a month's rent in advance to be forfeited if the Council is postponed. It is not to be held in Rome, but in some other place, may be, as the Pope up to this time, has not decided on his determining of holding the Council next December. He is, doubtless, supported in his purpose by the general disposition in the French and Italian press, to have the Council held in Rome, and to have the Pope, as a few days ago the Margrave of Baden had a long interview with Cardinal Antonelli, and intimated that the Emperor would be represented in the Council by M. Barthelemy.

CORPS IN MARIANO.—The Bennettsville Journal says: In conversation with several of our planters, recently, we were pleased to learn that the corps are still promising throughout the district. But corn has been suffering from the drought, and is doing well, but will do much better if we had more rain. In some parts of the district there has been no rain for several weeks, but in others, much had fallen, greatly to the benefit of both corn and cotton. When harvest was usually large.

A novel Virginia look passed Lawrence, Kansas, on the 18th inst. The lady had just come on from England to meet the gentleman who resides near that city. The parties had never met before, and the lady, who was a widow, and had never seen the man, came out to Kansas to meet and marry, in obedience to a betrothal made by the parents in the old country.

to whether steam or sail vessels are used. From San Francisco to Memphis, via the Pacific Railroad, the cost will be about $60. Contracts can be made with agents or parties engaged in the business of furnishing labor, at $18 per month, and the Chinese laborer, that the laborer will comply with his contract, the Chinese man needs about two pounds of rice, half pound of meat, quarter pound of salt fish, a small quantity of tea and vegetables per day, no bread needed.

Major Bailey, chairman of the Committee on Immigration, presented a report, stating that the cost of transportation from San Francisco to Memphis, via the Central and Union Pacific and Omaha and St. Louis Railroads, and Memphis and St. Louis Packet Company to Memphis, Tenn., will be as follows: In lots of one hundred to five hundred, $45 each, in currency. The above figure is given as being rates at which contracts can be made. From Memphis to any point in the interior, the cost will be about $10 each, and Georgia and South Carolina, upon the latter, the various railroads the rates will be one cent per mile.

STRENGTH FROM A CHINESEMAN.

One of the most interesting incidents of the Convention was a speech delivered in broken English by Tye-Kim-Orr, a Chinaman, who was present, attired in the national costume of the Celestials.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and the colored people became very poor, and they were now in large numbers in British Guiana, and other places. They are all healthy, and as the gentleman from Mississippi [laughter] But then, there is a more necessary thing, and that is, to build roads and to be the broom of the people here, and therefore the people of the South may be the means of turning them from poverty to Christianity, and to the land, though pagans in regard to religion, they were docile, obedient and affectionate, and would do anything for those who were kind to them. If they were only talked to, they were never tired of doing something for "mags," as they called him. In reply to sundry questions, Tye-Kim-Orr said, though he was so strong as a white people, they could do a great deal of work. He warned the people of the South in regard to bringing the Chinese here indiscriminately, and then this gentleman, who was a white people, they could do a great deal of work.

He said he was a "Chinese" [laughter] himself, but he left China in 1863, and since that time he had been in the West India Islands, and he had seen many of the Chinese laborers, and he could tell them much regarding them. The emancipation in the West India Islands, and